THE North South University's English and modern languages department has recently concluded its two-day Winter Fest 2025 on the NSU campus in Dhaka.

The festival served as a festive platform for creative expression and intellectual dialogue, fostering a hub for the community to engage in cultural activities and attracting students, artistes, scholars and enthusiasts from across the university, said a press release on Sunday.

This ceremony was attended by guests, including NSU board of trustees member MA Kashem, vice-chancellor Abdul Hannan Chowdhury, treasurer Professor Abdur Rob Khan, humanities and social sciences school dean Md Rizwanul Islam and DEML chairperson Nazia Manzoor, alongside faculty members and students.

Following the ceremony, students and guests explored the Winter Fair, a bustling hub of student-led stalls, crafts, and interactive exhibits, which faculty and guests also enjoyed engaging with.

'This event features works of various levels,' said Abdul Hannan, adding, 'In these two days, the English department organised various literary programmes, providing a platform for our students to showcase their talent, so that they may blossom through writing and skill development.'

At the inauguration ceremony, MA Kashem commented on how the students' innovative ventures will leave a positive mark on their futures. 'Hand-made things are rare these days. These creations should be discussed, showcased, and displayed. I'm very impressed to see this organised in such a short period of time. I express my thanks to all the shop owners.'
